New TV feature to Promote Irish Traditional Music.

Frame Productions and ‘The Irish at Home and Abroad TV Show’ team are pleased to announce that promoter of traditional Irish music, Ann Coen, will be joining the production team. Ann’s role as Executive Traditional Music Producer will be to develop a new monthly feature showcasing traditional Irish music artists around the country and further afield.

The first episode in the series will feature the Tuam Trad Festival which takes place between 15th & 17th September with events planned in Sligo and Roscommon in the coming months.

Show producer Kevin Griffiths said “ It is a real privilege to have Ann working with us to promote the great tradition of Irish music to the world”

Henry McGlade, presenter of ‘The Irish at Home and Abroad’ will be working with Ann to bring artists from across the country to the diaspora. Henry said “ Its great to have a regular feature on the show celebrating our great music traditions and culture”

More info about the show.

The Irish at Home & Abroad is a brand new, hour-long magazine style TV programme which will air on Sky 212 and Freesat 161 every Thursday night at 7pm.

This authentic and diverse programme will showcase business, culture, tourism, sport and entertainment and everything in between in Ireland and the UK highlighting the successes of the Irish at home and abroad.

Hosted by renowned MC, DJ and broadcaster Henry McGlade in Ireland and popular radio show presenter and broadcaster Martin Logan in the UK this show will appeal to those who like to keep in touch with the best that Ireland has to offer.

The show's purpose is to highlight Ireland's interests in the UK and enjoy the successes of the Irish at home and in doing so forge partnerships, develop links and draw parallels between the two communities.
